County Poultrymen Will Elect Officers on Monday Night

Organization Sponsor of Better Poultry in Hempstead County

NICHOLS TO SPEAK

State Flock Accreditor to Be Here Several Days Next Week

The most important meeting of the year, for the Hempstead county Poultry Association, is scheduled at the city hall in Hope on next Monday night, January 11.

Election of officers for the ensuing year will be held at this meeting. All members are urged to be present for the purpose of voting for officers to carry on the work of the year.

Flint Nichols, in charge of accrediting work in Arkansas has notified the president of the Association that he will be present for the meeting Monday night. He will remain here Tuesday and Wednesday to finish the accrediting work in the county. Any flock owner who desires to have their poultry accredited and cannot be at the meeting should get in touch with George Dadds, president, or Turner White, secretary.

Several members of the Nevada County Poultry Association have been invited to attend, including Mrs. S. F. Leslie, manager of Roe's Hatchery at Prescott.

There is a big demand at this time of the year for hatching eggs from accredited flocks. Hatcheries in this section are paying a premium above market price for this kind of eggs.

Says He Was Run Down Deliberately

Boy Living Near Cabot Hurt Seriously by Hit-and-Run Driver

CABOT—Raymond O'Daniel, aged 12, son of Lester O'Daniel living two miles south of here, was injured last Thursday afternoon when struck by an automobile as he was leading his pony beside Highway No. 67 about a mile from his home. The car sped on and left the boy lying unconscious beside the road.

Regaining consciousness the boy returned to his home and told his father that the car ran him down deliberately. The horse was found in the ditch almost drowned and badly injured.

The boy had been sent to a neighbor to borrow a sausage grinder and was returning home. Officers who visited the scene found the grinder, the saddle and bridle and two door handles which had been torn from the auto.

The door handles, which bore the factory number, were sent to Little Rock in an effort to identify the automobile. Officers in surrounding towns were notified.

Physicians believe the boy will recover.

Scrub Woman Received in "Style" at Memphis

MEMPHIS.—(AP)—Randi Lerohl, Superior, Wis., scrubwoman, who paddled a leaky rowboat down the Mississippi river from St. Paul, Minn., to Cairo, Illinois, arrived here "in style" Friday.

When the electric towboat Louisiana docked at the Memphis harbor, Miss Lerohl faced cameramen and a crowd of well wishers with an embarrassed frown. She and Memphis' official "welcoming committee," including three scrubwomen, didn't get talkative but she readily answered questions of reporters.

"I never got married because nobody ever asked me," she replied to one question.

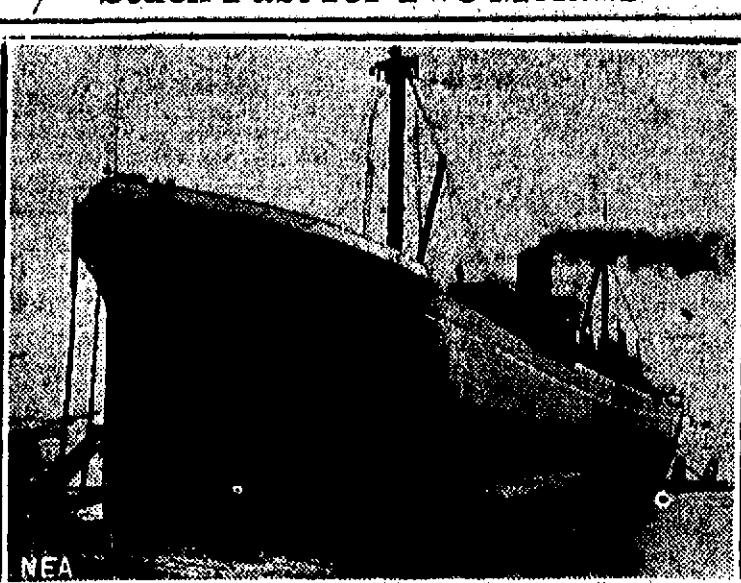

"I started the trip because I was too ignorant to know better," was her answer to another.

Miss Lerohl abandoned the rowboat trip to Cairo and accepted the invitation of the Mississippi Valley barge line to make the rest of her trip to New Orleans aboard their boat. The boat will leave for New Orleans Friday.

He said he was informed two persons were in the plane, and that both were safe.

Sevier asked one of the Goodyear semi-driftblimps attending the meet to fly over the Everglades in an attempt to locate the plane and assist it.

Stuck Fast for Two Months

The crew of the good ship Robin Goodfellow, have been involuntary landmen for more than two months as they labor to refloat the big freighter which ran aground near Newcastle, Del., in October. Hundreds watch, eat hot-dogs, as hydraulic jacks and tugs lift and pull futilely. So far the ship has been moved only two feet.

Boy Says Deputies Started Mine Fight

Witness Who Saw Harlan Battle Declares Officers Fired First

MOUNT STERLING, Ky.—(AP)—A farm boy who was plowing on a nearby hillside the day of the Evansville fight, Friday bolstered the contention of William Hightower's attorneys that deputy sheriffs fired first in the gun fight between jobless miners and deputy sheriffs.

Meanwhile, the court moved to round-up witnesses, who the defense attorneys were unable to pay their expenses to bring to Harlan county to Mount Sterling.

Walter Vanover, 19, testified he stood on the hillside and saw three carloads of men come down the pike from Black Mountain, that one man got out of the front car, fired shots at men crouched behind a roadside fence, and was shot down as he walked, rifle in shooting position, to a road bank.

This man was Jim Daniels, chief deputy and mine guard at Black Mountain, one of the three of the deputies' party slain. The commonwealth charges Hightower and others in the Evansville local of the United Mine Workers plotted the death of Daniels.

The commonwealth has stipulated Hightower did not participate in the battle, but charges he counseled the murder plot.

Germany Unable to Pay War Debts

Economic Recovery Under Present Conditions Impossible

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—Chancellor Bruening has informed Great Britain that when the Lausanne Reparations Conference convenes, Germany will tell the world that her ability to pay reparations is ended.

He told the British Ambassador that not only for the present but for an indefinite time to come, Germany will be unable to pay.

The German delegation to the conference will argue, he said, that so long as the present reparations policy continues, economic recovery of Germany and the world will be impossible.

Flapper Fanny Says

She will seek the Seventh district seat now held by Representative M. C. Tyrer of Dalton, Ga. Mrs. Benson disclosed her plans here at the residence of Mrs. William T. Healey, chairman of the Georgia division of the women's organization for national prohibition reform in a speech before approximately 100 women.

Georgia on Cash Basis Under Reorganized Plan

ATLANTA.—(AP)—With the beginning of 1932 Georgia went on a cash basis under a reorganized state government.

Laws enacted by the 1931 legislature prohibiting debts beyond actual revenue and giving the state's 34-year-old governor, Richard B. Russell, Jr., control of finances, went into effect.

Other enactments reducing governmental expenditures from 192 to 25, through consolidations and abolitions, likewise became operative with the passing of 1931.

"Wholesalers in Arkansas report an unprecedented sale of canning equipment. Five Little Rock wholesalers recently reported that more than 125 carloads of glass jars have been sold in that district. In the Pine Bluff district, 50 carloads of fruit jars, 10 carloads of tin cans, five carloads of jar tops and four carloads of jar rubbers have been sold. A report of a glass jar company, manufacturing about 85 per cent of the jars sold in the United States, shows that Arkansas leads the nation in the sale of that company.

Atlantic City High Bidder for National Democratic Meet

Holds Lead Over Kansas City, Chicago and San Francisco

TOUCH PROHIBITION

Smith, Raskob, Shouse Alliance Against Roosevelt Is Denied

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Democrats picked Chicago Saturday afternoon for their convention in June.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Stories of a Smith, Raskob, Shouse alliance against the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt for president were scathingly denied Saturday by John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Soon after the opening of a session for the choice of a convention city, a committee referred to the chairman's proposal for a prohibition referendum to the convention without any recommendation.

Raskob made the Roosevelt declaration amid applause.

Atlantic City pushed its bid for the convention to $200,000 and came to the fore as contender against Kansas City, Chicago and San Francisco.

Further Praise of Arkansas' Record

Railroad Magazine Article Commends 1931 Live-at-Home Program

"Arkansas has 'come back,' and how!" is the opening sentence of an article in the current issue of the Rock Island magazine, accompanied by an entire page of illustrations showing a canning kitchen, stores of canned foods and fruits and scenes of the abundant harvests in the state.

A statement from Senator Robinson, commenting on the great improvements in conditions in the state, also is featured.

Much credit for the recovery is given the state Agricultural Extension Service for its sponsorship of the live-at-home program. The "rapid transition from a food shortage area to one of abundance is not the result of accident or chance happening, but is the result of a careful, well-laid plan in food and feed production, preservation and utilization, developed and carried out by the county and home demonstration agents of the University of Arkansas. College of Agriculture," the article says.

"Last fall there was a big campaign for the planting of fall grains and gardens and it was followed by campaigns for early feed and food crops. This program is more familiarly known in Arkansas as the live-at-home program."

Quotes Senator Robinson

Senator Joe T. Robinson was quoted as follows: "There has been a remarkable improvement of conditions in the state of Arkansas. Nineteen thirty brought a severe drought resulting in the failure of staple vegetable and fruit crops. Accustomed to abundant yields, the people were poorly prepared for the disaster. During 1931 the conditions have been almost completely reversed. There is more than an adequate supply of all essentials. The barns are filled with hay. Large quantities of fruits and vegetables have been canned. Cotton, corn and rice crops have exceeded production in any previous year of the state's history. The low price of products and the hangover of debt from previous seasons constitute impediments to prosperity, but these are nationwide in their effects."

The food crop harvested this year in the state was valued at approximately $35,000,000, it was said. "Practically all the 242,000 farms in Arkansas were equipped this year with some sort of vegetable garden," the article continued. "The extensiveness of gardening in Arkansas the past year is reflected in the tremendous quantities of garden and home orchard products canned. A recent survey shows that approximately 36,000,000 quarts of fruits and vegetables were canned and are taxing the storage capacity of the farm homes. The drought of 1930 has taught the farmers to take advantage of nature's abundance by storing away for possible future emergencies."

"Wholesalers in Arkansas report an unprecedented sale of canning equipment. Five Little Rock wholesalers recently reported that more than 125 carloads of glass jars have been sold in that district. In the Pine Bluff district, 50 carloads of fruit jars, 10 carloads of tin cans, five carloads of jar tops and four carloads of jar rubbers have been sold. ## Charge Witness Taken Out of State by Two

GREENWOOD, Ark.—(AP)—Charges of attempting to prevent a witness from appearing in court were filed by Prosecuting Attorney Chester Holland Friday against Roy Chandler and Jimmie Dugan of Midland, Ark.

They were arrested Thursday night near Poteau, Okla., after allegedly taking Miss Ada Taylor, 16, Tyro, Ark., to Poteau, to prevent her appearing as prosecuting witness in the trial of Hamp Taylor, also of Tyro, her stepuncle, on a statutory charge in Greenwood circuit court Friday.

Holland said the youths confessed to county officers they were hired by Taylor to take the girl from the jurisdiction of the court. Chandler told Holland he was given some money by Taylor.

The girl, found at the home of Chandler's sister in Poteau, appeared in Greenwood court Friday morning to testify, but Taylor did not appear, said to have been prevented by illness. Bond of $750 was forfeited by the court and an alias warrant issued.

Dawes Will Retire as U.S. Ambassador

Picturesque Statesman Is to Quit Post After Geneva Parley

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—America's picturesque statesman, Charles Gates Dawes of the underslung pipe and vibrant language, is to retire as ambassador to Great Britain at the end of the Geneva arms limitations conference.

Just before leaving Friday night for Chicago, his home, he announced his plans to return to private life after years of almost constant service in the government.

A former vice president and mentioned before the 1928 primaries as a possible candidate for president, General Dawes will retire on the eve of another national election.

The name of Dawes already has been mentioned in speculation over this year's republican presidential nomination. He has put aside this speculation as "nonsense." However, the first reaction in political circles was to regard his resignation as significant politically.

Dawes' announcement was given to newspapermen gathered at the national press club by E. Ross Bartley, who was his secretary while he was vice president.

The typewritten statement was distributed without further comment as to Dawes' plans.

He was appointed ambassador to the court of St. James in 1929 by President Hoover after leaving the vice presidency the preceding year.

General Dawes' early utterances upon public occasions are almost as well known abroad as in this country. He had hardly reached London before he startled staid diplomatic circles by his disregard of formalities.

Carson, Candidate For Senate, Here

Independent Speaks Ahead of Election Tuesday, January 12

Sam D. Carson, independent candidate for senator against Mrs. Hattie Caraway, addressed two street audiences at Second and Main street in Hope Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Carson spoke at 1:30 in front of the First National Bank building, and at 2 o'clock addressed a smaller crowd on the west side of Main street below the Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. building.

His speech was an attack against Democratic politics, involving the selection of Mrs. Caraway by a committee rather than by popular election.

Rex Floyd, another independent, also is opposing Mrs. Caraway, the Democratic nominee, in a special senatorial election to be held throughout the state next Tuesday, January 12.

Only 153 Licenses Are Issued Here

No Notice of Time Extension Received Up to Saturday Noon

With the first deadline expiring Sunday the 10th, only 153 state automobile licenses had been issued for the new year up to Saturday noon at the special office of Sheriff and Collector John L. Wilson in Hope city hall.

State registrations are moving at the slowest pace in the history of Hempstead county. There are 1,200 automobiles in the City of Hope alone.

No advice regarding possible extension of the payment period had been received by the sheriff's office up to Saturday noon. If an extension is granted, the governor's proclamation would probably not become known until released to the newspapers Sunday or Monday.

Youths Repudiate Murder Admissions

Boys Declare They Wanted Transfer From School to Reformatory

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio.—(AP)—Two youths who confessed they fired an Ohio river log cabin in which eight persons were burned to death, repudiated their stories Friday because they feared murder charges.

The boys, Albert Ramer, 15, Gallipolis, and Elsworth Mowery, 17, Bucyrus, told officials that a craving for tobacco, denied inmates of the Lancaster Boys Industrial School, where they are serving terms for auto theft, led them to make the fake confession.

The youths said they had believed if officials would accept their story they would be sent to the Mansfield reformatory, where greater liberties are allowed.

Both boys were held in jail Friday night on first degree murder charges, but officials indicated the charges would be dropped and the boys returned to Lancaster.

Mowery and Ramer "confessed" to officials Tuesday that during a revengeful moment and under cover of darkness they had set fire to the cabin of James White, 59, burning him and his seven children. One child escaped. They said that they wanted to retaliate for a beating White had given Ramer.

Education a Menace?

Now that the possible effects of universal education on the world gripped by financial depression was furnished today by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, famous scientist, in his address at Hendrix College, in Arkansas.

Dr. Millikan was sounding a warning that colleges and universities must not try to educate too many students. This, he said, is a practice that tax-supported schools are especially prone to adopt, and he pointed to conditions in Germany as an example.

In Germany, he said, young men are crowded into the universities as never before, and he added:

"The state has made such education practically free. The cheapest thing to do in a time of unemployment is to send them to the university. The result is that the professions are flooded with men for whom there are no possible jobs; unemployed, educated men make for social unrest, for revolution and for wars."

The implications of that remark are interesting. Teaching a man how to think, apparently, is fine business as long as there is something for the man to do with himself; but if you let him sit down in idleness he is apt to start thinking about the society in which he lives, and if he sits down long enough he may decide that something ought to be done about it.

This, of course is just another way of voicing a truth that is often overlooked—that educating a man is simply a process of making him dissatisfied with things as they are; a process of making him discontented and fixing his eyes on the world that ought to be instead of the world that is.

It works out this way all the way down the line. The illiterate is less apt to protest about bad living and working conditions than the man who managed to get through grammar school as a boy. That man, in turn, is more easily satisfied than the high school graduate, who doesn't get discontent as quickly as the college man.

In a nation that is committed to a belief in the value of universal education, the possible effects of that rising scale of discontent are worth thinking about.

Assailing George Bernard Shaw

AMBASSADOR DAWES, according to cable advice from London, spent a few moments at a party the other evening assailing George Bernard Shaw to task for his socialist teachings.
In typical Dawes style, the ambassador shot holes in a radical little speech the famous dramatist had just made, and exported him to mend his ways.

Just what effect this may have had on Mr. Shaw is not stated; but someone might as well warn the ambassador that denouncing the man is not, very often, a paying business.
More than any other man of his time, Mr. Shaw has a way of thriving on attacks. Many, many have tilted their lances with him; not one of them has ever unhorsed him.

Indeed, in the end Mr. Shaw usually turns the laugh on his critics. Let Mr. Dawes be advised that the dramatist is about the most elusive target the modern world holds.

Taxpayers' Associations

ONE of the most encouraging phenomena of the depression is that noted recently in various parts of the middle west, where taxpayers are beginning to form associations to insist that state, county and city budgets be reduced.

To get action in a democracy you have to organize; and so far almost all of the organizing has been done by groups that want to see the government spend more money, not less.
One organization demands money for this project, another for that. Usually each organization gets what it is after, and the poor taxpayer, having no organization to make his wishes felt, gets soaked.

Now, however, the worm seems to be turning. It is an immensely hopeful sign. A militant taxpayers' organization could make governmental economy a popular thing among legislators.

Women as Artists

C. R. CHATTERTON, the artist whose paintings of Maine's coast scenes recently drew favorable attention in New York, asserts that the trend of American art hereafter will be in the hands of women.

Women, he says, respond to art and concentrate on it better than men do; and, he added, "woman is bringing art into the home and taking care to see that it is good."

In all of this he is probably right; and the encouraging thing about it is that feminine appreciation of art is on a much higher plane than it was a few decades ago. Ever since the Civil War women have been more or less the arbiters of things artistic in this country—not as critics, but as the main articulate public whose likes and dislikes subtly determine what style is to be uppermost. In the past their influence has not been entirely good; too often it has led to pretty-pretty things of no artistic significance.

Now the American woman is apt to have a sounder taste than the man. If her influence is to predominate, it may be a good thing for art.

The Old Henry

The old world has time and space for you and for bits of lace, for things as fanciful as dreams, for all in nature men behold, for countless lovely things she weaves, for which no purpose man perceives. At times she seems to draw apart, to make a work of art, to brighten with her labors rare, to place which others were bare. So in the busy life of man, which reason wholly seems to plan, the selfsame impulse bids him take the time to work for beauty's sake. And count as his supreme success the things of dainty loveliness.

Priceless Mosaics at Stanford Church Brought Over From Italy

Stanford Memorial Church . . . its mosaics are among the most famous in America.

A church whose priceless art is in stone, rather than paint; whose golden facade rises over the low, tiled roofs of the "quad" in a glittering triangle surrounded by a cross—this is the famous Stanford Memorial church, central architectural feature of the Stanford University center.

Approaching down the mile-long avenue, one finds this golden triangle is the upper part of a magnificent mosaic of "The Sermon on the Mount," exquisitely wrought in multi-colored stone, as is most of the art. The mosaic—largest outdoor effort in America—fills the whole upper part of the church front in a brilliant picture.

Biblical personages, allegorical designs and figures of saints are used for the remainder of the outdoor mosaic plan.

Thin blocks, half an inch square, so neatly fitted that they form what at first seem vivid paintings—these are the Stanford mosaics. They were made in Venice, plaster to stout sheets of paper, shipped to Stanford, and installed by workmen sent from Italy.

Sheets of pure gold and silver leaf, covered with a thin film of clear glass also were used.

The Memorial church is cruciform, of a modified Moorish-Romanesque architecture. Interior walls are buff sandstone with tooled face, relieved by mosaics and carved designs. Behind the marble altar is a replica of Costantino's "Last Supper," from the Sistine Chapel at Rome. This is the only mosaic copy ever permitted. Mosaic ceilings and stained glass windows of unusual artistic merit combine with the mosaics to make Stanford church a mecca for artists and architects visiting California.

Stanford Memorial Church is part of the great university erected by the bequest of Leland Stanford, Jr. It is a "church," not a chapel, the Founding Grant of the university enjoining the board of trustees:

"To prohibit secular instruction, but to have taught in the university the immortality of the soul, the existence of an all-wise and benevolent Creator, and that Obedience to His laws is the highest duty of man."

Services are under direction of Dr. D. Charles Hunter, chaplain, and clergymen of all denominations are invited to participate. Daily morning service is voluntary. The church seats 1800.

Work of construction was started under direction of Mrs. Jane Lathrop Stanford in 1899 as a memorial to her late husband, Senator Leland Stanford. It was opened for services in 1902. Earthquake in 1906 damaged it, and it was not restored and reopened until 1913, the mosaics being duplicated from the original design.

AT THE TYPING

Janet Gaynor adds a new type of role to her repertoire in "Delicious". For romance in which she co-stars with Charles Farrell. She is an irresistible force from the highlands of Scotland.

These are some of the tunes such as "Someday" where, which are "Blah-Blah-Blah" ridiculous bit of music. Brendel does it all right to "New York" (Hollywood) symphonic piece which stands shall be a companion to his "Rhapsody in Blue" numbers, especially the "Blah-Blah-Blah" are clearly intended to make them to the "Blah-Blah-Blah" names as to add to the drama.
